RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT ADOPTED BY WASHINGTON FIRE COMPANY.

Inasmuch as it is his pleasure, God, in His wisdom and love, to call into the higher life our beloved friend, fellow-member and former president, Thomas Alfred Davis, we, the members of Independent Washington Fire Company No. 1, desire to give expression, in this manner, to our keen appreciation of his many splendid qualities, and his many unselfish efforts in behalf of our company.

With us, as for the whole community, he stood always for the greatest good obtainable—putting aside all thought of gain or personal advantage, and attempting only to accomplish those ends which would make for the betterment of the affairs of our organization, and the advancement of its real interests. And so faithfully and so well did he follow his chosen course, during the whole of the fifteen consecutive years when he served us as our president, that he made for himself a record of which we are justly proud, one never surpassed by any of his worthy predecessors in office, and one which his successors can scarcely hope to equal.

In his passing, we know that we have lost a true friend, a loyal member and a wise and eminently fair-minded adviser; and that our community has been deprived of one of its noblest, most generous and most public-spirited citizens, one who spoke and acted fearlessly, at all times, in the cause of civic uplift and improvement, and whose memory will remain with us so long as our people shall continue to recognize and approve a warm heart, a high sense of duty and earnest, unselfish endeavor in every righteous cause.

It is with sincere grief because of our loss, and with heartfelt gratitude for his life among us, that we offer this tribute to his memory.

JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON CAMP ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF MAJOR CHEN-OWETH.

At a meeting of Joseph E. Johnston Camp No. 442, United Confederate Veterans, Maysville, Ky., June 18, '15, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has seemed good in the great Providence of God to permit our beloved comrade, Major Thomas J. Chenoweth, not only to live the allotted span of life, but many years of usefulness beyond that period, yet the grief at his loss amongst his comrades of the Confederacy is none the less poignant and heartfelt, and deep gloom spread over our Camp on June 16, 1915, when his death was announced, and every one of the little band of sixteen survivors in the Camp felt that he had lost a warm and devoted friend, with no hope of filling his place in our rapidly diminishing band.

Major Chenoweth entered the Confederate army in 1861 as a private, and for faithful and heroic conduct was promoted to the rank of Major. The south had no braver or more gallant defender, and his numerous friends throughout this and other states sincerely deplore his death.

Resolved, That by his death our Camp has lost one of its most esteemed comrades, and his family, one who was always faithful, loving and devoted.

This community loses one of its best citizens, who was always active in promoting the general welfare, and devoted to his church, his home and his business.

To his devoted family, in this, the darkest hour of bereavement, we extend the light of love and sympathy of his comrades, and ask to share in the sorrow that comes to us all as our loved ones leave us.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Camp, and a copy sent to the family.

W. H. ROBE,
Committee.

BOARD OF TRADE

Mr. Frank L. Devine, of New York, Tells How Maysville Could Form One.

The Ledger, believing Maysville should have a live Board of Trade, wrote Mr. Frank L. Devine, Assistant Secretary of the Merchants' Association of New York for information upon the subject.

Below we give his letter in full, without omitting a single sentence. We commend it to every person in Maysville who has the city's interest at heart:

"New York, June 21, 1915.
"Mr. C. E. Dietrich, Gen. Mgr.,
"The Ledger Publishing Co.,
"Maysville, Ky."

"My dear Mr. Dietrich:
"Absence from the office and pressure of work has delayed my reply to your letter of May 12th—a delay which I regret."

"As there is competition among individuals, so, too, is there competition among communities as a result only that community goes ahead which is composed of live, active, progressive citizens working together for the community good."

"The carefully directed, scientific efforts of commercial organizations in some of the cities and towns of this country have made it necessary for the business men of every community—which is to go ahead—to organize themselves into an association of some sort through which to work for the general good of the community in which they live and do business."

"Those who have given some study to the subject are convinced that the progress of any community is in direct ratio to the energetic efforts of its business men through a community organization."

"As every community needs some such organization, it follows that Maysville needs one. It, at least, needs one if it is not to be beaten in the competition of communities."

"Of course, Maysville has had commercial organizations and they have failed to me, because they have directed their efforts almost, if not wholly, to securing new manufacturing establishments for the city."

"Maysville is, and so far as I know, has always been, and I believe always will be, an agricultural center. I do not believe that it will ever be a manufacturing center. There is some reason—I am not sure what it is—why Maysville is not, and can not be, an industrial city. The prosperity of Maysville depends wholly upon the prosperity of the people in the great agricultural country which surrounds the city."

"Therefore, the efforts of any commercial organization which is formed in Maysville should be directed towards increasing the purchasing power of this agricultural community. You may already have in Maysville a Farm Bureau—I do not know. If you have not, one should be established by your commercial organization if, and as soon as, you organize it. The purpose of these bureaus is to secure and distribute to interested farmers the latest obtainable information concerning agricultural methods, thereby increasing the quality, quantity and value of the farm products. As a natural result, the purchasing power of the farming community is increased and so the town prospers."

"As I look back upon them, the old Tobacco Fairs in Maysville were of peculiar value to the town. Not, at all, because they increased the number of persons in town for that day, and so brought in 'new' money. That result was only of temporary value. There was, however, a result of permanent value, in that the farmers were given a certain incentive to produce, from year to year, tobacco of better quality."

"Farm Bureaus, such as I have spoken of, have been operated successfully in many towns situated as is Maysville."

"Through the united action of the business men of the town, such affairs as 'Dole Days,' 'Buy in Maysville' days, 'Trade at Home' days, could be successfully conducted, both in the spring and fall. The purpose of such movements, of course, would be to induce the persons residing in the country surrounding Maysville to do their shopping in the town. If the merchants of the town would take such a movement seriously, offer merchandise at the right prices, advertise properly, and render the proper service, the benefits would far exceed what the merchants would, at this time, be willing to grant."

"Other lines of activity looking to making Maysville a better place in which to live and do business would very naturally suggest themselves to the organization if its members would give serious service on its committees and governing board. Finally, such an organization would offer the machinery through which could be obtained an expression of the views of the business and professional men of the town on any subject of local, state or national importance."

"Such organizations are successfully operated in cities not much, if any, larger than Maysville. For example, there was recently conducted a campaign for the purpose of organizing a commercial organization in Miami, Fla. The population of Miami, according to the last census, was 5,471. I am told that the city's population is actually larger than the figure given by the Census Bureau, but that its permanent residents do not exceed 10,000. As a result of a campaign 565 members were obtained for the organization, the annual dues being $25. Miami has today a commercial organization equipped with the proper machinery and with the necessary means to promote its wholesale and retail trade, its tourist business and its agricultural interests. If the organization avoids the mistake of expending its energy on the location of industries, it will succeed."

"In numberless other cities throughout the country, about the same size as Maysville, there are organizations having an annual income of $3,000 per year and upwards. These organizations generally devote their efforts to promoting the wholesale and retail trade of their towns and to the betterment of conditions in the surrounding agricultural country. The annual dues of members vary from $12 to about $75 per year."

"In Maysville probably $4,000 to $5,000 per year would be required for the successful operation of its commercial organization. The organization can not hope to live unless it has a secretary who has given some study to the methods of successfully operated commercial organizations. A young man with limited experience could probably be obtained for from $1,200 to $1,500 per year. In addition to his salary, there would be the salary of a stenographer or two, necessary traveling expenses and other office expenses. Four to five thousand dollars should, however, cover the cost of operating a successful organization in the town."

"The dues ought to vary in proportion to the benefits a member could reasonably be expected to obtain from the work of the organization. The big store should certainly contribute more than the small store. If annual contributions were sought from the members of, say $10 to $50, the necessary funds would quickly be raised."

"In order that the organization have a chance to show its worth, each member should pledge himself to continue his support for not less than three years."

"Memberships should be sought from firms, individuals and corporations."

"Be a little careful in dealing with so-called organization experts. Be sure your man is an expert—and then be sure that he is accustomed to carrying out his contracts. Look up his record."

"Finally, keep your organization out of politics."

"It is really a difficult matter for me, after an absence of ten years, broken only by short visits, to attempt to outline the character of organization needed in Maysville. I have, therefore, written only in a very general way. I shall be very glad indeed to furnish you with any detailed information you may need from time to time, if you will only request it of me, or to help you in any other way that I can."

"With kindest regards, believe me to be, yours very truly,
"FRANK L. DEVINE,
"Assistant to the Secretary,
"The Merchants' Association of New York."

HOUSTON HALL

Wins the Kentucky State Challenge Cup At Louisville Shoot.

Louisville, Ky., June 24.—Mr. William H. Hall, of Maysville, Kentucky state champion in 1914, won permanent possession of the Challenge Cup offered by the Kentucky State Trap Shooters' League, in the feature race of the opening day of the annual state shoot at traps of the Louisville Gun Club at Kenwood yesterday.

Hall, Thomas H. Clay, Jr., of Paris, and J. D. Gay, of Vine Grove, each won a leg on the trophy and it was necessary for one of these to be high gun in the last five events on the program to obtain ownership of the big trophy.

"Memberships should be sought from firms, individuals and corporations."

"Be a little careful in dealing with so-called organization experts. Be sure your man is an expert—and then be sure that he is accustomed to carrying out his contracts. Look up his record."

PUMPING COFFERDAM.

The Bates-Rogers Construction Company, who are building the lock and dam No. 33, above this city, started on Thursday to pump out the gigantic cofferdam, 1,000x300 feet, in which the locks will be built. The pumps are of the latest type and pump about 5,000 gallons of water a minute. The water is being pumped into a trough that has many contrivances to break the force of the stream when it strikes the river bed so as to keep it from undermining the works. The water in the dam was lowered about six feet the first day, and the engineers hope to have the cofferdam about pumped dry by Friday afternoon. Many fish have become trapped in the cofferdam and will be caught and the fish-eaters of this vicinity will have a feast.

Messrs. Hermann Calvert and Cecil Dickson, who were on a canoe trip down the river, have returned after going as far as New Richmond. They report a good time and are figuring on a more extensive trip in the near future.
